INTRODUCTION

Aleksandr Ivanovič Gercen (Herzen) was born in Moscow in 1812. He died in Paris in 1870. He was a writer and a famous critic of the Russian government. He greatly influenced both the government and the political emigres. He gathered a circle of friends around him at the Moscow University. Their seditious opinions led to his exile. He was pardoned in 1839, then again arrested in 1841. He left Russia for Paris in 1847. After suppression of the June Days uprising in 1848 he went to Italy. He lost his wife in 1852 and, overcome by misfortune, fled to London. His house became a Mecca for political emigres. He founded the free Russian Press in 1853, which brought out the first anti tsarist publications like Poljarnaja Zvezda and Kolokol. He supported the Polish rebellion in 1863 which antagonized the Russian public.

The collection was received in 1938 and contains letters to Gercen from several correspondents, including Louis Blanc, Jules Michelet and Giuseppe Mazzini, an album with drawings, a letter from Tsar Alexander I to Gercen's father, and letters to Gercen from Giuseppe Garibaldi, Victor Hugo, Pierre-Joseph Proudhon, Thomas Carlyle and others, letters from Gercen to several correspondents, including his son Alexander A. Herzen and his friend Nikolai P. Ogarev, notes by Gercen and the manuscript of part V of 'Byloe i Dumy', personal documents of Gercen, correspondence by Gercen's relatives and by Nikolai P. Ogarev, manuscripts of poems by Ogarev, articles by and on Alexander A. Herzen and printed material.

The numbers mentioned in the NB's refer to the printed edition of Gercen's works by M.K. Lemke (Leningrad, 1919-1925).
